A record-breaker at 65

Her parents objected when Willy Van Rysel first put on a swimsuit. But Van Rysel, one of the stars of the Region 4 Long Course Masters Swim Championship at North Shore pool Saturday, wanted to swim.

"In those days, a girl in a swimsuit, well . . . Van Rysel said as she wavered her right hand. "It was a bit too much."

Those days were in 1937 when Van Rysel was a 17-year-old in England. Now 65, and a resident of Bourne-mouth, England, Van Rysel is a record-breaking masters swimmer. Breaking records is one of the reasons why Van Rysel is in St. Petersburg.

Last week in the United States Masters Championships in Houston, Van Rysel broke three records — in the 50, 100 and 200-yard backstroke. But world records can only be recorded in meters, which brought Van Rysel to the metric-measured North Shore pool.

Swimming in the 65-69 age group, Van Rysel won the five events she entered Saturday, setting one world record. She collected blue ribbons in the 50-meter freestyle, 50 backstroke, 50 butterfly, 200 freestyle and 200 backstroke. Her 45.00 time in the 50 backstroke was a world mark.

"I'm very pleased with the record. That's why I'm here," Van Rysel said. "I hope to break the 100 (backstroke) tomorrow — if it's in the morning. That's one thing here. I'm used to an open pool to be about 55 to 60 degrees. Here, I'm in 88 degrees. For me that's hot. I have no energy."

When not in the pool, Van Rysel has been directing her energies toward advancing masters swimming in her own country.

"Masters is just starting there," Van Rysel said. "I was the first British masters swimmer in the United States. I triggered it off. We have our own nationals now.

"But they still have to learn. They think when you're over 60 you can't do it anymore."

She laughed as she said the last line. At 65, the housewife-swimmer is doing plenty. This is her second trip to the Suncoast. She swam in this same meet four years ago.

"I competed in nine events then and won all nine," Van Rysel said. "I would like to come here often, but traveling is so expensive. When I go home it will be some time till I return."

Besides her success in St. Petersburg and Houston, Van Rysel has won a long list of awards and set numerous world records in younger age groups. She was the first woman presented the David Wheeler Award for outstanding service to long-distance swimming.

She also serves as a self-appointed promoter of her sport.

"Masters swimming is growing," she said. "Not only swimming, but in other sports. People want to do something. If you are a cyclist or a tennis player or a runner, you want to continue to it."

"People sit in an office or in their cars all day — they want to get out and do something. Swimming is wonderful. You can compete till your dying days."

Today, Van Rysel will show how alive she is as she guns for another record in the final day of the long-course championship. Van Rysel will again demonstrate the style she developed when she daintily donned a swimsuit 45 years ago.

"I never had any encouragement," she said, "but I still swam. It was something I wanted to do. I love it."

"I never had a coach. I just took to it like a duck."
